

David Elder practices communications, competition and privacy law with Stikeman Elliott LLP, where he is Chair of the Communications group and a member of the Competition and Foreign Investment, Privacy & Data Protection, Government Relations, Regulatory and Public Policy practice groups. He also serves as the firm's Chief Privacy Officer. David is one of Canada's leading practitioners in the area of unsolicited telecommunications, and is also recognized as one of the country's foremost authorities on Canada's Anti-Spam Legislation (CASL). He has advised a range of clients with respect to compliance with the Unsolicited Telecommunications Rules, including the National Do Not Call list, and both the electronic message and computer program installation provisions of CASL. Based in Ottawa, he has over 25 years of experience gained in private practice, government and corporate settings. In addition to serving as Legal Counsel to the CRTC and running his own practice, he was formerly Vice President, Regulatory Law with Bell Canada, where he also served as the equivalent of Chief Privacy Officer. David writes and speaks frequently on privacy and communications issues.
