

Ysolde Gendreau, professor at the Faculty of Law of the Université de Montréal since 1991 where she teaches intellectual property law and competition law, is currently Associate Dean for Faculty Affairs and Continuing Education as well as Faculty Secretary. Her main field of expertise is copyright law, especially comparative and international issues. A graduate of McGill University (B.C.L., LL.B., LL.M.) and of the Université de Paris II (doctorat en droit), she is a member of the Bar of Quebec. She has also taught at McGill University, Université de Paris II, Université de Paris XII, Université de Nantes, Université de Strasbourg III, Université de Lyon 2, University of Victoria (summer programme in Victoria and Oxford), University of San Diego (summer programme in Florence), and Monash University (Australia). She has published extensively, both in Canada and abroad, and was the Canadian contributor to Paul Geller's International Copyright Law and Practice in 1999-2013. Among her more recent publications are contributions to two books she has edited: A Shifting Empire: 100 Years of the Copyright Act 1911 (Cheltenham: Edward Elgar, 2013) (edited with U. Suthersanen); Langues et droit d'auteur / Language and Copyright, (Montreal: Carswell & Brussels: Bruylant, 2009) (edited with A. Drassinower). She has been a member of the Patented Medicine Prices Review Board (1995-2000), President of ATRIP (Association for the Advancement of Teaching and Research in Intellectual Property) (2003-2005), and President of the Canadian group of ALAI (Association littéraire et artistique internationale) (2006-2011). She is a Vice-President of ALAI and an associate member of the International Academy of Comparative Law.