

Simon Hodgett

OSLER

Partner, Technology

Toronto

416.862.6819

shodgett@osler.com

Education

London School of Economics, LL.M.

Osgoode Hall Law School, LL.B.

Memorial University of Newfoundland, B.A.

Bar Admission(s)

Ontario (1992); Newfoundland (1996)

Practice Area(s): Technology; Outsourcing; eHealth; Procurement

Simon's practice concentrates on technology outsourcing, other complex services arrangements and procurement. He advises enterprises whose businesses rely on technology and complex services. He also advises technology suppliers ranging from large established software providers to early stage technology companies. Simon has been lead counsel on projects in the banking, pension, investment, healthcare, energy and other sectors. His practice includes data agreements, outsourcing arrangements, software licensing, government contracting, e-commerce and payment systems. Simon writes and lectures on various areas of technology law, both in public forums and client education venues. Simon leads initiatives in support of Osler's emerging company practice, including defining innovative technologies to serve the commercial IT contracting needs of these clients.

Simon is a past President of the Canadian Information Technology Law Association (IT.Can). He is listed as Repeatedly Recommended to Computer & IT Law and Technology Transactions in the Canadian Lexpert Directory and in Best Lawyers.