Nigel is a partner in our London office and specialises in data protection and privacy, commercial contracts and intellectual property law. He works across a wide variety of business sectors, including financial services, technology, media and life-sciences.

Nigel regularly advises on multi-jurisdictional data protection matters. He advises companies across various sectors on strategic issues relating to personal data management and new technologies such as privacy impact assessment and privacy by design, as well as crisis management (eg data breaches).

Nigel is described in Chambers 2015 as "technically faultless" as well as "very practical and very good at finding solutions".
