

Richard Pearse is a Senior Counsel with eHealth Ontario and has been with eHealth Ontario since February 2011. eHealth Ontario is the operational services agency established by the government of Ontario to play the lead role in harnessing information technology (IT) and innovation to improve patient care, safety and access in support of the government's health care priorities. Richard's practice includes representing eHealth Ontario on privacy and health law matters, in the procurement and negotiations of agreements for IT systems, in the review of transfer payment agreements, and on intellectual property and data centre matters.

Prior to working for eHealth Ontario, Richard was in private practice for 2 years as Richard Pearse – Technology Law, providing legal advice to small and medium sized information technology, software and engineering companies. Before working in private practice he worked as legal counsel for various IT companies focusing on licensing, outsourcing, privacy, security, and many other aspects related to contracting IT services. The companies he has been employed by include: Hewlett-Packard Canada, INTRIA-HP, EDS Canada, SHL Systemhouse and Andersen Consulting.

Richard is a graduate from Osgoode Hall Law School who articulated at Fraser and Beatty. He also practiced as a professional engineer before going to law school.