Judith Robinson is the national practice head of our intellectual property practice in Canada. She practices primarily in IP litigation, providing strategic advice before, during and after litigation, as well as representing clients before the courts and related administrative tribunals. Judith has successfully represented clients such as Bell Helicopter Textron, Servier, Cogeco and Ivanhoé Cambridge before the Federal Courts. She has led patent trials for complex cross-border litigation and subsequent damages quantification, and she has achieved rapid settlement of matters via strategic negotiation.

Judith is ranked by a number of legal directories, including Chambers and Best Lawyers. She is recognized as an IP Star: Top 250 Women in IP, and Canada's most Powerful Women: Top 100.
