

David Thomas

David Thomas is a Vice President at TELUS Health, with international responsibilities for TELUS Health and a national role under corporate development for strategic partnerships, health mergers, acquisitions and investments in health. His prior management roles at TELUS have all been as the Executive Lead on the development and implementation of large complex health deals and the solution platforms they require. His teams have been instrumental in the success of TELUS Health on many of their current large complex deals, taking these opportunities from concept through sales, implementation, to operations. Specifically, over the last few years he was focused on securing and expanding the footprint of TELUS's health activity in the Canadian Provinces of Ontario, Newfoundland and British Columbia in such areas as health information exchanges, drug information systems, chronic disease management, and home health monitoring.

David has been with TELUS, since 2004, working for several years internationally in Asia Pacific, and then subsequently more nationally, on large projects across the country. He has twenty five years of experience in the Health Care industry spanning both the public and the private sectors, and across the diversity of acute care, ambulatory care and homecare services. David has extensive experience as a healthcare consultant and as an executive in operations, business development, and in managing large, complex, political projects.

He has to his academic credit a Master of Health Sciences in Health Administration from the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto and a Bachelor of Science from McGill University. He has also completed a Certification Course from Harvard Law School in an Executive Program in Negotiation, and rounded out his business background with a number of post graduate economics courses.

David remains an active volunteer on several Boards, in the health (Kids Health Link Foundation), technology (Information Technology Association of Canada); education (Trinity College School) and the sports sector (Ontario Floorball Association).
